THE TIMES KODAK.

Interesting News Items Gathered Around Salem.

Elijah Poage, Mark Moomaw and Capt. M. M. Rogers, of the county, were all in town yesterday.

Mrs. Frank Whitescarver is visiting her sister, Mrs. John Airheart, on Seventh avenue, Roanoke, the latter being quite sick.

Prof. Stearns, who is one of the faculty of the Summer School of Methods at Bedford City, was at home yesterday, and reports it as the most successful session of all, with everyone pleased.

The People's Party of Roanoke county will assemble in "mass meeting" at the courthouse Monday, July 16, 1894, (court day), to select delegates to the State convention, which meets in Lynchburg August 23. The People's Party also propose to hold their convention to nominate a candidate for Congress in the Sixth district in Lynchburg August 24.

As Roy Moore was driving down Catwaba mountain Friday night with a two horse wagon of produce, the breast strap broke allowing the wagon to slide on the horses, which started to run just as he jumped to the ground and locked the wheels. But for his presence of mind and quickness he and his team would have been dashed to pieces on the mountain side.

Justice Camper yesterday heard the case of M. H. Hicks, of Ball's siding, vs. the Norfolk and Western railroad to recover $18, the value of a heifer killed by a train and decided in favor of the plaintiff. Ed. Robertson, counsel for defendant, gave notice of appeal. The case of P. H. Rutts against the railway company for $25 for a cow killed on the track was certified to the county court.

The Roanoke Red Sulphur Springs are lively now with almost every room and cottage filled, a good orchestra in attendance, and a company of cultured and pleasant people. Harry Chapman fills the part of host with all the geniality of his father and is just as courteous and anxious for the happiness of others as he was, which is saying much.

Messrs. M. P. Crawford, J. A. Francis and W. P. Moomaw, constituting the electoral board of Roanoke county, met at the courthouse yesterday and appointed N. D. Barnett registrar for Brand's store, vice Joseph Woods, resigned. J. W. Chambers was also made judge of election at Bent Mountain in place of Lee Adkins, removed. The appointment of constables under the Walton election law was deferred till September until the county judge has assigned the new precincts.

Yesterday morning early a fifteen-year-old colored girl, named Carrie Martin, was beaten by her mother, at their home on Calhoun street, for misbehaving herself. The girl has a violent temper and vowed she would as soon die as be beaten. She then went into the house and swallowed two ounces of laudanum, falling senseless on the bed soon after. Her condition was not discovered for some time when Dr. Killian was sent for and ordered vigorous measures during the day, which were carried out by the neighbors, so that at sundown the girl was in a fair way to recover.

Board of Supervisors Meet.

At the regular meeting of the board of supervisors of Roanoke county, held at the courthouse yesterday, the following business was transacted:

The town of Salem was granted the use of the county jail as a station house for two years on condition that the town charge nothing for the use of water for the jail and pay for all damages caused by said use.

W. P. Moomaw and T. M. Starkey were appointed a committee to see the secretary of the Roanoke Development Company with reference to the proposition of said company to transfer certain bridges over Roanoke river to the county of Roanoke.

T. M. Starkey and W. P. Moomaw were appointed a committee to confer with the citizens living near the West End, Roanoke, with reference to the county furnishing hose and fire plugs for their protection from fire, committee to report at next regular meeting.

E. Iza Robertson, of Hanging Rock, was allowed $3 a month for twelve months, she being a pauper.

The superintendent of the poor was ordered to post notices forbidding trespassing on the county poorhouse farm.

By unanimous vote of the board, the action taken at the May meeting adopting a county dog law was rescinded, and also assessments of dogs made by the commissioners of the revenue. The board also set aside the payment of premiums for scalps an old law revived at the May meeting. Sixty dollars were allowed for the completion of the Webster road on Bent Mountain, to be worked out equally by the surveyors, Owens and Puckett.

"Last June Dick Crawford brought his twelve-months old child, suffering from infantile diarrhoea, to me. It had been weaned at four months old, and being sickly everything ran through it like water through a sieve. I gave it the usual treatment in such cases, but with no benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born, or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25-cent size had been used a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny constitution disappeared and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by the remedy."—J. T. MARLOW, M. D., Painesville, Ill. THE MOVEMENT GROWING.

Recent Progress Made in Road Improvement—The Outlook Bright.

The cause of good roads has no more earnest advocate and energetic and systematic worker than Roy Stone, vice president of the National League For Good Roads and United States special agent and engineer for road inquiry. His latest contribution to the cause is a work entitled "New Roads and Road Laws of the United States," from which the following extract is taken:

"The task of transforming a million miles or more of bad roads into good ones, a task which involved the disruption of century old systems, the development of new lines of legislation in all the states of our Union and in many even the changing of their constitutions, and which has threatened to require an expenditure running into the billions, has commonly been deemed so vast and difficult as to be utterly hopeless, but it suddenly appears that the few good citizens who have had the courage to attempt it, here and there, have reason to be astonished at their own success. Not only have the ways and means been found without oppression to the taxpayer, but the actual cost of good road-making has been brought far below the early estimates. Sixteen states have passed new road laws more or less radical in their nature and one has amended its constitution to permit the adoption of such laws. Many hundreds of miles of good roads have already been built, in localities widely separated, under varying conditions and through various methods of administration, finance and construction. It is therefore no longer necessary to go abroad for instruction in this reform, but, on the other hand, highly necessary to learn what is being done at home. The country is so vast that what is done and well done in one section is often unknown or misunderstood in another, and each community has, so far as regards the experience of others, wrought mostly in the dark. Some recent developments of the road movement tend, however, toward a thorough investigation of the subject and a wide diffusion of the knowledge so gained."

EUROPEAN ROADWAYS.

Points of Difference Between Italian and German Highways.

Much has been said by travelers of the excellence of Italian highways, and with truth, but in one respect they are inferior to the German. The Italians usually apply the macadamizing process only to the middle section of the roadway, the side sections being left unimproved and mostly uncarved for the Germans, and to a great extent the Austrians also, make a finished road over the whole available width. A reason for this would appear in the habits of the two peoples. The Germanic race, being enthusiastic walkers, use their roads, and particularly the sides, for pedestrian purposes as well as driving, while the Italians seldom venture far afoot on the highway, leaving it to carriages and teams. Be this as it may, the narrower Italian road wears out faster, and when worn whatever it offers of inequality, dust or mud must be endured, as the sides furnish no way of escape, whereas when the middle of a German road becomes uneven through use the sides still afford a good path.

In touring with the bicycle through Germany, Switzerland, Austria, Sicily and Italy I have, as a rule, found the roads in the hilly and mountainous better than in the level districts. Whether this is owing to more thorough drainage on account of the grade to a firmer subsoil, or to the necessity of more perfect construction, I do not know. Probably the observed fact is due to all of these factors combined.

If the people of the United States can be brought to realize the importance of road reform, to appreciate the convenience and economies it will bring to all classes and to act in the matter, American enterprise can soon construct roads that will compare favorably with those of the older European nations.—Cor. New York Post.

The Roads of India.

"It is always usual to speak of India as a country whose public works and general civilization are a long way behind the times," said Captain Easley of the British army, who is enjoying a protracted leave of absence after being invalided in India. "People who make this criticism would be surprised to see some of the roads in British India, especially any one who has been used for a long time to the highways of America. The longest trunk road in the world is in the northern part of India, and it is kept in repair at comparatively small expense, thousands of men being glad to work on it, especially during famine years, at purely nominal remuneration. This road is 1,800 miles long and is in first class condition throughout, being more or less macadamized its entire length. For purpose of transportation this road is invaluable, and in the event of an outbreak or a war it would prove of immense value to the military authorities. A road of this length and of this quality would be an object lesson in this country, and it would be of special usefulness, owing to the magnificent distances between your largest cities."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Wheelmen and Good Roads.

In New York state the recent law passed by the legislature leaving the matter of road improvement to supervisors has given the wheelmen a chance to take an active part in politics. The idea is to begin in the caucus and secure nominations for supervisors of men who are for good roads. When the nominations are made, irrespective of party, the wheelmen propose to do their best to elect good roads candidates.

Reforms Move Slowly.

The use of broader wheel tires should be enforced by law. It sometimes seems as though the most urgent reforms move slowest.—Haverhill (Mass.) Bulletin.
